

“I am not Aeneas, I am not Paul.
Who am I to go there?”

Unpacking The Divine Comedy

Quality, Credibility, and Accessibility

Though I am not a Dante scholar by title, I take scholarship seriously. Every episode begins with methodical, academic research, then transforms into something memorable. This project is where deep literary study meets modern storytelling.

Research

- Each episode begins with close reading, line-by-line annotation, and cross-reference to multiple scholarly interpretations from sources such as:
 - Dartmouth Dante Lab
 - Dante in Translation (Yale)
 - The Political Vision of the Divine Comedy (Ferrante)

Synthesis

- Using my background in instructional design, I translate complex medieval ideas into accessible insights. This involves:
 - Thematic distillation
 - Comparative philosophy
 - Historical and political context mapping

Storytelling

- My background as a multimedia designer allows me to:
 - Build immersive narrative arcs
 - Score each episode with original music
 - Create emotionally resonant moments using modern tools

Strategy

- Experience and fluency in social media marketing informs:
 - Short-form visual content optimized for social sharing
 - A focus on memetic clarity; making ideas spread through relevance and resonance
 - Educational value embedded in design

DANTE LAB

A customizable, digital workspace for scholarly analysis of Dante Alighieri's Divine Comedy

- Compare limitless combinations of the poem, translations, and commentaries
- Filter over 300,000 lines of text
- Perform up to four individual searches simultaneously
- Browse 700 years' worth of commentaries
- Read the poem with facing-page translation

Dante wrote in the vulgar tongue, the language of the people. Not for scholars. Not for courts. But for ordinary souls: exiled, uncertain, searching. He believed the highest truths should speak in the voice of the people.